Paid a pittance and trapped in debt

The exploitation of Third World nurses

by Tina Wingfield

THE GOVERNMENT is turning a blind eye to the rising numbers of foreign nurses working illegally in Britain's private care homes.

Nurses from the Philippines, India and Africa, are being imported by British recruitment agencies on student visas. The use of student documentation allows agencies to bypass the more rigorous checks applied to standard work visas and fast-track foreign nurses through the immigration process.

Registered as 'overseas students' the nurses have no formal employment rights and this allows agencies to get away with paying them a pittance of £4.75 per hour, more than 40 per cent lower than their British colleagues.

On arrival in Britain the new recruits are charged an agency fee of around £2,500 to be placed within a private care home and a further fee of £1,200 for adaptation courses introducing them to British techniques and procedures. Their nursing skills often go to waste as they are forced to carry out largely menial tasks such as cleaning, cooking and laundry for up to 60 hours a day.

Although the nurses have been lured to Britain under false pretences, many are afraid to complain. They are in debt to the recruitment agencies for compulsory placement and adaptation fees and fear deportation for breech of visa regulations.

The failure of the Government to shut down the visa scam that allows recruitment agencies to trap overseas nurses in such a system, is a disgrace.

FOREIGN NURSES: Exploited here and needed in their own countries.

Filipino, Indian and African nurses, trained at the expense of their home countries, should provide vital health services for their own people.

The British National Party is committed to ending the unprincipled exploitation of vulnerable Third World workers by greedy British employers. Britain's NHS is perfectly capable of training its own nursing staff - all that is required is sufficient investment from central government to finance training programmes and to reward our nurses with the salaries they deserve.

BMA Chairman echoes our call in last month's Freedom that 'We must train our own doctors'

Importing medical staff is 'shameful'

By Steve Johnson

THE LARGE NUMBER of immigrant doctors and nurses working in Britain's National Health Service are nothing for successive Tory and Labour Governments to be proud of, according to a top doctor.

Instead it is a "shameful record of exploitation". We are poaching skilled medical staff from poor countries which need them more, instead of training British doctors and nurses ourselves.

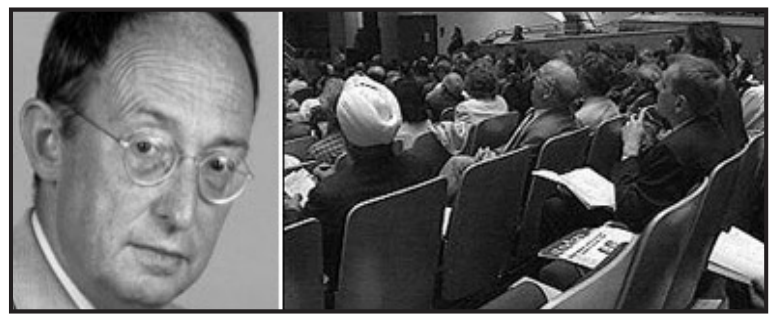
That's what Chairman of the British Medical Association, top surgeon James Johnson, told over 500 doctors attending the BMA's Annual Conference in Llandudno.

"Throughout the history of the NHS, we have relied on other countries to fill NHS manpower gaps – both for nurses and doctors", the doctors' leader told his Conference.

"As the fourth largest economy in the world we are still doing so. Taking doctors away from countries like South Africa and nurses from the Philippines, who need them more than we do".

"It's a shameful record of exploitation. Surely after half a century of the NHS we should be producing enough doctors to look after our patients".

The BMA Chairman is simply echoing what we have long said. Importing immigrant medical staff is bad for British patients. The frequent barriers of language and culture, and sometimes questionable medical qualifications can lower the quality of treatment they provide.



JAMES JOHNSON: Britain is poaching skilled medical staff from countries who need them more, instead of training British doctors and nurses ourselves.

It's even worse for patients in the Third World which is desperately short of doctors.

Britain has one doctor for every 500 patients, yet countries from where we take doctors are much worse off.

*In South Africa there is one doctor for every 1700 patients.

*In the Philippines there is one doctor for every 1750 patients.

*In Pakistan there is one doctor for every 9000 patients.

Britain is skimming off many of their best doctors and other medical staff leaving disastrous consequences for the sick and infirm in those countries.

The leader of Britain's doctors summed up the BNP's view:

"We should be producing enough doctors and nurses to look after our own patients".

Then overseas doctors could return to their own countries and look after the sick and infirm there who need their expertise much more than we do here.

STILL EXPLOITING THE THIRD WORLD: Britain is skimming off many of their best doctors and other medical staff leaving disastrous consequences for the sick and infirmed in those countries.

The case for HIV testing

THE NATIONAL Health Service can't afford the treatment costs of looking after immigrants arriving from Africa with HIV.

Over the last five years, heterosexual intercourse has become the largest and fastest growing exposure category for HIV diagnoses made in the UK.

The vast majority of the heterosexual HIV infections diagnosed in Britain were acquired in Africa.

The cost of managing an HIV-positive patient in the UK is around £15,000 per year.

The total cost to the NHS for treating cases of African origin diagnosed in the UK over the last five years is over £1 billion.

Until immigration into Britain can be stopped completely, all migrants should be tested for HIV at their point of entry into the country.

Top brass slates the Eurofighter white elephant

'Euro-madness' threatens the defence of Britain

by Steve Johnson

A POLITICALLY-motivated and militarily irrelevant Euro-project is undermining British defence and is likely to lead to massive cuts in the RAF, Royal Navy and Army, including the disbanding of even more famous regiments.

Now at last the white-elephant "Eurofighter" project has forced one of the RAF's top brass to speak out about it, even if only after he has just safely retired!

Air Marshal Sir John Walker, formerly a senior officer in the RAF Strike Command on whom the Eurofighter has been forced, and later Chief of Defence Intelligence, slammed the project as "a fiasco from start to finish". He said its massive cost overruns are now forcing big cutbacks in our armed forces.

He is clearly right. In January this year a damning report by the National Audit Office revealed that in the financial year 2002-03 alone the Eurofighter project costs increased by another £1.2 billion in return for virtually no further progress. The project is now expected to cost over £20 billion. It is running eight years late already, and may not now deliver the original order of 232 planes to our armed forces.

Even if the plane were on time and on budget, it is now outdated and useless. It was conceived 35 years ago to defend West German airspace from a Soviet attack that never came. The design dates back to 1985. The project has been hamstrung by political pressure to make it "European". It was designed by a committee of Germans, Spanish, Italians and Britons, all wanting the plane to do different things. It is being built in bits in Germany, Italy, Spain and the UK, then assembled like a jigsaw. As Air Marshal Walker put it, this "is an unbelievably cockeyed way of putting an aircraft together".

DEFENCE CUTS: To meet the extra cost of the Eurofighter, the Government wants to disband distinguished Army regiments such as the Black Watch.

The Air Marshal, who was one of the RAF's most respected senior officers, summed the whole mess up: "It is out-and-out Euro-madness and has massively increased the Ministry of Defence's costs, which has had a knock-on effect on the strength of our armed forces".

That effect, as budgets are cut back to pay for cost overruns on the Eurofighter, is now expected to lead to a cut of 8,000 in the RAF's strength of 52,000, a cut of six warships and 3,000 personnel from the Royal Navy, and the disbandment of distinguished and heroic Army regiments such as the Black Watch and the King's Own Scottish Borderers.

Air Marshal Sir John Walker's revelation that the Eurofighter Emperor has no clothes is long overdue. Britain needs British fighter aircraft to defend our own airspace. We never needed Euro-committee confections designed to protect Germans from Russians at the behest of Americans, and we certainly don't now.

If the Eurofighter ever sees the light of day in RAF service it will be named the Typhoon – an insult to a great all-British WW2 aircraft.

It should never do so. The project should be scrapped and replaced by an all-British fighter. Another world-beater from the country that came up with the Spitfire and the TSR2. Keeping Brussels happy is of no importance beside keeping Britons safe. British skies must be defended by British aircraft fighting for Britain.

THE EUROFIGHTER: Costing over £20 billion, it's eight years behind schedule, and now there won't be enough to meet the MOD's original order.

WE NEED YOUR HELP

THANKS to our party political broadcasts and our election address, the British National Party has had over 10,000 membership enquiries, all within the space of four weeks.

Each enquirer has been sent a booklet about the BNP, and over the next month they will receive a visit from a BNP representative.

For a political party like ours, this is a huge operation and very expensive. Many of these enquirers are already joining, so now - fortunately - we need more donations to help us integrate these new recruits into our growing organisation.

We would be very grateful for your help to enable our party to become an effective opposition Your donation now will help the British National Party grow and be able to face the challenges of 2005.

Please make all cheques to 'The British National Party' and send them to The Secretary, P.O. Box 158, Deeside CH5 2WW. Please send a SAE for receipts for £25 or under.

British National Party WHERE WE STAND

CRIME: A crack-down on crime with more 'Bobbies on the Beat'. Tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of the death penalty for child killers and terrorists. Zero tolerance for drug-dealers and violent thugs.

IMMIGRATION: An end to immigration and the scandal of bogus asylum seekers flooding Britain. Use the billions now wasted in foreign aid to fund generous 'Homeward Bound' schemes to encourage immigrants to return to their land of ethnic origin.

INDUSTRY: British ownership and control of British industry and resources, including the mass media. Protection of British jobs and industry by selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the British market.

HEALTH: We will use the vast sums of money now wasted on funding our membership of the EU for the restoration of an effective national health service and proactive measures to produce a healthier population in the first place.

EUROPEAN UNION: British withdrawal from the European Union. We will trade with Europe where it benefits Britain, but want no political ties or monetary union.

EDUCATION: A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and an end to 'trendy' teaching methods which have failed our children so badly.

ENVIRONMENT: A healthy environment for a healthy people - the protection of our countryside; a ban on greenfield-site house building except in exceptional cases of genuine local need and an end to field trials of genetically modified crops.

FARMING & FISHING: The regeneration of British farming, with the objective of achieving the maximum self-sufficiency in food. The restoration of the fishing industry through protection of our traditional fishing grounds.

GOVERNMENT & COMMUNITY: The establishment of a government that puts British interests first. A return to healthy moral values and policies aimed at strengthening the family and community. Tough penalties for corruption in public life.

FREEDOM: A massive expansion of freedom and democracy to roll back the erosion of our traditional freedoms and truly reflect the wishes of the people. The adoption of popular referenda and high technology direct democracy.

DEFENCE: An alternative defence strategy based on the principle of armed neutrality. No British blood should be shed in conflicts which do not involve British interests. The restoration of the County Regiment system and the reversal of defence cuts which have weakened our Armed Forces and cost thousands of jobs.

REMEMBER! It doesn't matter if you don't agree with us on every last thing. Like all other democratic political parties, the BNP includes some members who disagree with one or two policies. Just ask yourself whether you agree with more of our policies than those of the other parties. Most people do, which is why we are the fastest growing political party in Britain today.

Closing down the BNP

THE COMMISSION FOR Racial Equality is led by black, former Marxist, Trevor Phillips. Approximately 80% of its staff are non-white. These unelected parasites get through more than £20 million of taxpayers' money directly every year, as well as deciding which schools get what share of a Home Office brainwashing budget of more than £400 million.

This bloated and institutionally anti-white bureaucracy should be the prime target for Gordon Brown's civil service cutbacks. But far from being axed, this gang of tax-guzzling, ethnic minority bullies now has the Government's blessing for yet another job – closing down the British National Party. Yes, that's right, a party which won more than one million votes in the June elections faces being shut down by the democratically unaccountable Commission for Racial Equality.

The CRE is doing this by taking on the case of an Asian who alleges that the BNP's constitution, which admits to membership only "persons of British or closely related European stock" discriminates against him.

Our position is that, while Britain has powerful bodies like the Black Police Officers' Association or the Association of Muslim Lawyers operating as pressure groups on behalf of minorities, yet white police officers and lawyers are forbidden from forming similar bodies, then the indigenous British majority need - and are morally entitled to - one organisation which is there especially for them.

The CRE bullies don't accept that, so are hauling us before a special tribunal, which has the power to hand out unlimited 'compensation'. In other words to bankrupt the BNP. In addition, a 'guilty' verdict in terms of discrimination could well then be used by the CRE and the Government to press the Electoral Commission to deregister the party – so barring us from standing in elections.

Over the last few weeks, the British National Party's leadership and members have been debating our response to this, the most serious homegrown threat to British democracy in living memory. Our answer will be law-abiding and peaceful, but also radical.

Our supporters and voters can rest assured that we will not allow the CRE bullies to take away their right to a real democratic choice at election times, and our members can be certain that, whatever tactical swerves we have to make to survive, our commitment to our long-term goals will remain as strong as ever.

CAMPAIGNING IN BLACKBURN: British National Party candidates Nick Holt and Tony Dailly hope that a magic-mix of BNP leaflets for the parents and balloons for the children will help their campaign in Earcroft ward for Blackburn and Darwen Council.

Where Whitsun has gone Easter could follow

I AM NOT a religious person, but I do appreciate the influence that religion has had on me.

It provided a much needed moral framework in my childhood and it has given ceremony to those important milestone occasions in my life.

Religion is so deeply intertwined with our history that without a knowledge of Chritianity how can we understand our past and how we developed to be a nation?

Yet it was after reading Philip Larkin's poem 'The Whitsun Weddings' that I realised that most of our young folk today have probably never heard of Whitsun. They probably have no idea that there was a time when families would dress in their Sunday best to go to Church.

It seems to me that the word, Whitsun, has been lost along with the holiday, yet why did we let go of this chunk of our culture?

Apparently as a moveable feast it became inconvenient, but do we really need to compartmentalize our lives into the same separate time zones every year?

Let's bring back Whitsun - that's what I say. After all, where Whitsun has gone, Easter could quite easily follow.

The right to resist

THE European Charter of Human Rights is a legal framework used as a device to place swathes of decision-making in the hands of judges who will assuredly interpret them with a left liberal-bias.

The African Charter of Human and Peoples Rights in its Article 20 states that, 'All peoples shall have the right to exist and to continue to exist as an ethnic and cultural group, and to resist domination'.

It most certainly is the right of peoples to continue to exist and to resist domination and this is inseparable from the right to have political parties to represent them in this endeavour.

This is something all fair-minded people should seriously give thought to. Especially in the light of the gerrymandering by Tony Blair and his cohorts in the Labour Party at the European Elections to deny the BNP and those who voted for it their rightful representation.

Tim Haydon, Leeds.

A racist organisation?

I THINK that the Commission for Racial Equality (CRE) should be taken to court for discrimination.

If you look at their website you will see that from their ten committee members, just three are white.

You might of course expect this from such an organisation, but if it is meant to follow its own race relations criteria calling for quotas to reflect the ethnic make-up of this country, shouldn't there be more white commissioners than those from the ethnic minorities.

It seems as though the very CRE itself is acting in a racist manner and therefore liable for prosecution.

Mark Pearson, Manchester.

Our fading culture

WHEN ARE the British people going to realise that 'multi-culturalism' is a way of keeping other cultures alive, while encouraging ours to fade away?

I am a PhD student at a top London University and in my department English students make up just 2% of those studying. The rest are foreign, most from Asia.

I'm not a racist, I'm REALISTIC. I see what is happening and I want to do something to retain my own cultural identity and that is why I voted for the BNP last month.

It may sound silly, but now I can't even get any fish and chips where I live, yet there are more than 20 curry houses and kebab takeaways to pick from.

Hazel Johnson, London

Freedom under attack

I AM a prison officer so I'm not allowed to join the British National Party.

I am an also an ex-serviceman and have served my country at home and abroad, fighting for the freedom of people in places I couldn't even pronounce. Now I find that my freedom is under attack here in the UK.

Although I am unable to become a member, I will continue to vote for the BNP. I can't even discuss the BNP at work as the POA (Prison Officers Association) even deem this unacceptable.

Joe MacBain, Liverpool.

Sold down the river

LAST MONTH, along with my wife and two friends, I went over to France to visit the Normandy beaches.

We had many old veterans with us on the coaches and I had the privilege of talking and spending time in their company.

The topic of conversation for the veterans was all the same. The war - was it worth it, and what a shocking mess this Government is making of things.

These brave old soldiers feel betrayed and cheated by nearly every politician since the 1970's.

They believe their generation has been sold down the river, cheated on pensions, housing and taxation. They see the culture they fought to preserve being destroyed, and the country they risked their lives defending, now being overrun by very different people with no interest other than in themselves.

Brin Jenkins, Cardiff.

Positive minority roles

BRITISH Telecom has recently won plaudits for its work in promoting links with ethnic minorities. However, the company might also like to forge closer ties with this country's ethnic majority.

Over two thirds of the many photographs in a brochure I received recently from BT featured people from ethnic minorities. The company's TV advertising campaigns are similar.

Government-led TV advertising the NHS, DSS, etc can't wait to feature those from ethnic minorities in "positive roles" in campaigns, yet a recent advertisement highlighting a crack down on those people committing benefit fraud appears to contain only white actors.

Mr G. W. Gibson, Ipswich.

They want to frighten voters with the sack or homelessness, 'Freedom' exposes how NEW LABOUR = NEW FASCISM

"Support the 'wrong' party and end up homeless or out of work." This was one of the ways in which Tory landowners or Liberal factory bosses used to bully ordinary voters into backing their chosen candidates back in the early nineteenth century, before the introduction of the Secret Ballot turned Britain into the first real parliamentary democracy in history. But now, thanks to the mini-Stalins of Blair & Blunkett's New Labour, those bad old days are back, as the following two shocking reports show only too clearly:

Democracy has been murdered 1

"Secret ballot? Pull the other one!"

THE SIGHT OF voter identification bar codes on both the ballot papers and on the accompanying 'Voter Identification' signature slips shocked huge numbers of people across the whole of the North of England and the East Midlands when they saw the papers for their all-postal election on June 10th.

But for thousands of voters all over New Labour's anti-BNP postal vote 'experiment' areas, shock turned to fear as word was spread by hundreds of pro-Labour trade union bigwigs that "the votes will be kept and checked and anyone who votes BNP will lose their job."

This was particularly common among shop stewards from Unison, the public sector union which has been hijacked at almost all levels by far-left activists who support deeply unpopular causes such as an open door asylum policy and paedophile 'rights'. Naturally enough, these political oddballs hate the BNP, and never miss an opportunity to use lies to stop people voting for us.

Sadly, this lie did work in many cases. BNP phone lines received a number of calls from angry supporters who said that they desperately wanted to vote for us, but didn't dare to because of the impact on their families if they lost their jobs as a result.

Most of those who made the effort to call were reassured when they were told that the same trick was played against thousands of council workers in Stoke during the city's Mayoral election, but that large numbers of them – at all levels in the council – voted BNP despite the threats, and that not one of them had any trouble whatsoever as a result.

So we know for sure that the "you'll lose your job if you vote BNP" story is just another groundless New Labour lie. But that doesn't alter the fact that it is also a disgraceful piece of electoral fraud – made possible by Labour's deliberate introduction of a system which abolishes the Secret Ballot which has been the foundation stone of British democracy since 1832.

The BNP is pledged to reintroduce the Secret Ballot in all elections, and to restrict postal votes to the elderly and infirm. Anything else is an invitation to electoral fraud.

Democracy has been murdered 2

Birmingham Council The mini-Stalins

"It's your house, so we'll tell you what posters you can put in your window." This is the shocking anti-free speech attitude of the left-wing fanatics at the heart of the council in England's second city, Birmingham.

Tucked away in the small print of the council's Right to Buy scheme is a clause that forbids new homeowners from putting up any posters, symbols, signs or election posters for any party or organisation that some Jobsworth in the council decides is 'racist'.

So Birmingham council is claiming the right to tell homeowners and council tax-payers that while it's fine for their neighbours to put in their window an election leaflet from perhaps Labour or the (Kashmiri) Peoples Justice Party, if they want to put up a BNP leaflet they'll be evicted from their own home!

And, if they are allowed to get away with this, it won't stop there. Under the same rule, a homeowner who has a china pig in a window could be thrown out for 'offending' Muslims. Or someone who hangs a Crucifix in their house on a wall that can be seen from a window could be taken to court if their Muslim, Jewish or other non-Christian neighbour finds the Crucifix offensive – or if the council claims that they might.

The fact that the Labour bosses of one of Britain's most important councils believe that they have the right to tell homeowners which party's posters they can or cannot display at election times is another sign of just how extreme and anti-democratic they really are. New Labour = New Fascists!

Can you help us to help you?

THE GOOD NEWS is that the BNP Legal Team are preparing a legal action to challenge these covenants in the contracts. It will cost you nothing as we will do all the work and you may even get a lump sum as compensation if the court holds that these restrictions on your civil rights are unlawful. If you . . .

a) Have been a house buyer under the right to buy scheme from Birmingham City Council or know anyone who has bought a house from the council under the right to buy scheme

b) Are about to become a house buyer from Birmingham Council

c) Know anyone who is about to buy a house from Birmingham Council

d) Know of similar attempted restrictions on freedom of political expression being imposed by other councils

Union bullies target fireman with 30 years service

HAMPSHIRE FIRE service has stood up to union intimidation and refused to dismiss leading fireman, Ian Johnson, for being a British National Party candidate in the European Election.

Fire Brigade Union bully Dean Mills wrote to Hampshire fire chiefs calling for them to sack Mr Johnson, who works in a senior role at Brockenhurst fire station.

But Hampshire Fire and Rescue Service says Mr Johnson's political views are legal and have had no effect on his role as a leading firefighter during his 30-year career.

David Askew, spokesman for the service, said:

"Ian hasn't broken any rules and he's not tried to recruit or force his political views on to his staff.

"We recognise that in a free and democratic society our employees are entitled to belong to and campaign for any lawful political party."

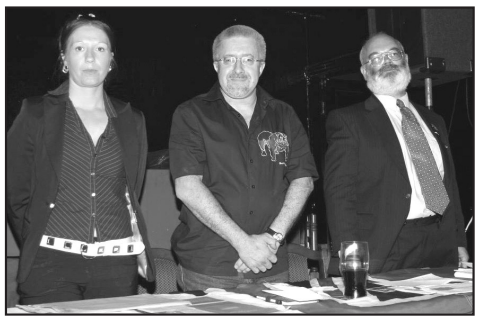
Bradford victors speak in Leeds



TWO OF THE British National Party's four new councillors on Bradford Council attended last week's meeting of Leeds BNP, outlining their hopes and fears as they take their seats on the council.

Councillor Arthur Redfearn, told the packed meeting about the orchestrated trade union campaign against his employers, West Yorkshire Transport Service, to bully them into terminating his employment.

Councillor Angie Clarke, then reported on her campaign in Keighley West where she topped the poll, beating the 11 other candidates with 1659 votes - a staggering 14.5% and a clear 242 votes ahead of her nearest rival.

There were a large number of new faces at the meeting and many of these took the opportunity to join the party there and then.
